It was a show that was a little weird and broken and challenging and often heartbreaking and just a really good show. It was the kind of show I loved to watch, a genuinely worthwhile one. Unfortunately, NBC has decided that Parenthood is no longer profitable. But rather than say "Okay, well, let's actually go make a show then", they are cancelling it. This news was announced to the show's cast and creators two weeks before the upcoming season starts. I know they weren't planning on airing a final episode until May, but they didn't know the show was going to be cancelled. The show will continue on to finish its run, of course, and I'm sure there's still quite a lot of online crying and teary-eyed regret to be had. That sounds like it'd be a lot of fun to look back on in ten years. And I just can't get over the fact that NBC is so hard done by in this. There are shows
